Germans Still Remember their Historical Greatness

Filed under:

Despite decades of re-education, many Germans just can't let go of the truth. The British Daily Mail reports that "One in four Germans believe there were positive aspects to Nazi rule, according to a new poll. The poll run by the weekly Stern magazine asked whether National Socialism also had some 'good sides such as the construction of the highway system, the elimination of unemployment, the low criminality rate and the encouragement of the family.' Results showed 25 per cent responded 'yes'. The poll, run by the Forsa agency, also showed that people aged 60 or older had the highest regard for aspects of the era, with 37 per cent answering 'yes.'" (In other words, people old enough to actually remember some bits and pieces of National Socialist Germany.) "Those who grew up directly after the war, now aged 45 to 59, were the least enthusiastic about the Nazi era, with only 15 per cent responding 'yes.'" These people grew up during the de-Nazification era, when guilt and fear of the past were pounded into young Germans' brains with a sledge hammer. Their parents were portrayed as devils incarnate, period, and the slightest doubt or suggestion of doubt was not permitted.

The Daily Mail

continues "The finding comes after a popular talk show host was fired for praising Nazi Germany's attitude toward motherhood. Talking about Nazism in Germany, broadcaster Eva Herman said while there was 'much that was very bad...,' there were good things, 'for example the high regard for the mother' under the Nazis. Despite being fired from her show, Herman, 48, who has written books urging a return to more traditional gender roles in Germany, has stood by her comments. She said: 'What I wanted to express was that values which also existed before the Third Reich, such as family, children and motherhood, which were supported in the Third Reich, were subsequently done away with by the 68ers' - a reference to 1960s leftists." This is almost an unknown phenomenon: someone bravely standing up and spitting in the eyes of the leftists, liberals and feminists. (more...)

Nobel Prize Winner James Watson Speaks the Truth about Race

Filed under:

by Charles Coughlin

According to the Times Online: "One of the world's most respected scientists is embroiled in an extraordinary row after claiming that black people are less intelligent than white people. James Watson, a Nobel Prize winner for his part in discovering the structure of DNA, has provoked outrage with his comments, made ahead of his arrival in Britain today. More fierce criticism of the eminent scientist is expected as he embarks on a number of engagements to promote a new book 'Avoid Boring People: Lessons from a Life in Science'. Among his first commitments is a speech to a London audience at the Science Museum on Friday. The event is sold out."

Dr. Watson will, of course, be facing scores of bleeding heart liberals and legions of screaming Third Worlders from Britain's ex-colonies. The truth is still unpopular in the year 2007, but the brave Dr. Watson wants to stand up like a man and speak the truth in the hope that the next generation of Britons are more willing to restore sanity to government, than the previous generations. (more...)

Letting The Katz Out Of The Bag

You know, there's an amazing thing about truth. You just can't keep it down. No matter how the Jews try to hermetically seal off Western society from the truth about themselves, their obsession with money, their many depraved tendencies or their endless corrupting influence on our government, the truth keeps escaping through the cracks or under the door.

From the Jerusalem Post: "It's a list of the world's most powerful people, 100 of the bankers and media moguls, publishers and image makers who shape the lives of billions. It's an exclusive, insular club, one whose influence stretches around the globe but is concentrated strategically in the highest corridors of power. More than half its members are Jewish. It's a list, in other words, that would have made earlier generations of Jews jump out of their skins, calling attention, as it does, to their disproportionate influence in finance and the media. Making matters worse, in the eyes of many, would no doubt be the identity of the group behind the list - not a pack of fringe anti-Semites but one of the most mainstream, glamorous publications on the newsstands. Yet the list doesn't appear to have generated concern so far, instead drawing expressions of satisfaction and pride from the lone Jewish commentator who's responded in writing."

The Jews are getting careless and sloppy. Good. For decades, Jews changed their names to more "Anglo" or at least less Jewish-sounding names. The Jews would always deny their control of the mass media even though three Jews, Sarnoff, Paley and Goldenson, ran NBC, CBS and ABC literally for decades. (more...)

High-Yellow Controversy in Black Community

Filed under:

by Jeff Davis

A recent article in the Detroit News

notes “The history of slavery and the resulting legacy of intra-racial segregation have sometimes pitted darker-skinned and lighter-skinned blacks against one another. A noted Los Angeles-based activist who goes by the name of Pearl Jr. ...founder of the Black Women’s Movement in Los Angeles and the author of the book Black Women Need Love, Too ... (observed) ‘Colorism is real in the black community. It’s especially very degrading to dark-skinned black women.’ ”

One of the many unusual and little-known aspects of the black community has always been that mulattoes, or high yellows, or redbones—light-skinned Negroes with a significant amount of Caucasian blood in them—have always been more highly-respected in the black community than the pure-black, “blue-gummed”, nappy-headed types. Notable Black figures such as Julian Bond and Colin Powell are noticeably Caucasian in their skin color and facial features. Blacks hate and despise their frizzy, “nappy” hair and some of the major money-makers in black products have always been various formulas and potions to straighten their hair. The results are generally pretty unsightly, but less so than nappy steel-wool frizz. Interestingly, most native blacks living in Africa actually shave their heads rather than wear a “natural” which would become home to a variety of insect pests. Afros are also reminiscent of the 1970s, platform shoes and bell bottom pants.

The divide between blacks and mulattoes has always been kept a largely unspoken secret. Now a Detroit hip-hop DJ has blown the lid off that secret. (more...)

Interventionism? Isolationism? Actually, Both

Filed under:

- Civil Rights

— @ 4:06 am

by Rep. Ron Paul

A few months back, I wrote back-to-back weekly messages regarding globalism and isolationism. In writing those columns, I focused on the fact that our nation's interventionist foreign policy was precisely what was isolating us from other countries.

Turkey's recall of their U.S. ambassador in the wake of last week's resolution, passed in the House Foreign Affairs Committee in condemnation of Turkey, is a perfect example of what I wrote in those columns, as well as what I have been saying for years.

The House has passed similar resolutions for years, praising some foreign countries or political groups while chastising others. It is my policy to vote against resolutions of this sort whenever they have the impact of placing our country in the middle of an internal political problem of some other nation, or involving us in some regional conflict. In fact, this is almost always the specific intent of resolutions of this sort. Often, I am the only Member of Congress to vote against these resolutions.

Some have questioned these votes, arguing that they are meaningless statements of opinion. However, I have always been more skeptical, and careful, about voting for these measures. Last week's reaction by Turkey, a long term ally and NATO member, shows that Congress should be a lot more restrained in sticking our government's nose into the affairs of other nations. Desperate American Cities Try to Drive out Illegal Invaders

Filed under:

- Civil Rights

— @ 6:45 am

by Jeff Davis

While most state and federal level government agencies adopt an apathetic attitude towards illegal immigration, more and more small localities, towns and counties across America are trying desperately to find some way to drive out the invaders, or at least move them on somewhere else.

The Dallas News

reports: “The phone calls started pouring in at Irving [Texas] City Hall on Thursday morning. They were prompted by activists who implored a crowd of more than 1,000 people at a rally Wednesday night to call for an end to a program that turns over arrested illegal immigrants to Immigration and Customs Enforcement. But most callers weren’t asking for an end to the program – they were voicing their support. ‘It was ringing over and over, and by far, the biggest percent was in favor,’ City Secretary Janice Carroll said Thursday afternoon.”

The Dallas newspaper

continues: “Irving police last year began using what’s called the 24/7 Criminal Alien Program. It provides for around-the-clock communication with federal authorities and is designed to detain illegal immigrants who have been accused of a crime. It’s the latest tool being used by local governments in the absence of a federal overhaul of immigration laws. So far, Irving police have turned over more than 1,600 people to immigration officials. Mayor Herbert Gears estimates that about 300 people in Irving are being turned over each month – more than in any other city in the nation. He said city officials are obligated to uphold the law and will continue to use the program, which is available to any city that wishes to participate.” (more...)

Deporting Some Dangerous Gang Members \(Finally\)

Filed under:

- Civil Rights

— @ 6:08 am

by Jeff Davis

Most sane people think that illegal aliens, who committed felonies, would be deported after serving their jail sentences. Amazingly, this has not been done in many cases, and deporting violent gang members is considered “news.” According to the Los Angeles Times, “In an ongoing crackdown, 28 foreign nationals suspected of having ties to street gangs in the San Fernando Valley were arrested by federal immigration agents Friday during early morning sweeps throughout Los Angeles County. More than 200 U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement agents fanned out across the Valley, Palmdale and other areas of the county, raiding residences and arresting members of 15 street gangs, officials said. Among them was Jorge Torres, 31, a reputed member of the Project Boys in Pacoima whose criminal record includes convictions for drug charges as well as battery on a police officer, officials said. Torres, who has been deported five times, has been indicted by the U.S. attorney’s office for reentering the United States. If convicted, he faces up to 20 years in prison.”

Locking someone like this violent Mexican up in an American prison isn’t a perfect solution—he and those like him need to be permanently removed from circulation, but at least they are going after him and a few like him. Bravo!

Now the big question: how many of these Latinos will actually be DEPORTED and how many will sit in the gang-infested jails for months while their lawyers work to get them some kind of release on promise to appear, whereupon they will once again disappear into the barrios and resume committing crimes? Ron Paul Campaign Update

Some local ads being run, but nothing nation-wide yet.

by James Buchanan

The weekend GOP debate in Orlando was unremarkable. One news article reports “The leading candidates — Giuliani, Romney, Fred Thompson and John McCain — haggled over a range of issues along with four long-shot contenders: former Gov. Mike Huckabee of Arkansas and congressmen Duncan Hunter of California, Ron Paul of Texas and Tom Tancredo of Colorado.”

Ron Paul thankfully got a little more exposure and some national airtime with the always-hostile Sean Hannity. The number of people watching these debates appears to be dwindling especially with the main focus on the excruciatingly boring “Big Four” candidates, Romney, Giuliani, Thompson and McCain.

Simultaneous with this event, Ron Paul announced a four-state advertising campaign. On the plus side, at least Ron Paul is running ads in several states somewhat early. On the negative side, the Paul campaign has still failed to run any nation-wide ads and the text of the radio ads is horribly bland, focusing on tax cuts, which should make Ron Paul almost completely indistinguishable from all the other candidates, who will most likely promise tax cuts too. The two biggest issues for the 2008 election are the Iraq War and illegal immigration. 72 percent of Americans want our troops brought back from the Iraq War and about 85 percent of Americans want immigration laws enforced. There should be a tidal wave of support for Ron Paul if only he could make himself known to ordinary Americans as well as his stand on those two critical issues. (more...)

Tell Ron Paul to Run Nation-Wide Ads Now!!!

Filed under:

- Civil Rights

— @ 1:54 am

by James Buchanan

I've been trying to tell the Ron Paul campaign to run some nation-wide ads as soon as possible so that he will expand his base. I have gone out of my way to explain all the logic behind this in earlier articles, but apparently logic and reason didn't have enough influence. Now his latest fund-raising effort is falling badly short of his stated goal to raise 12 million in the fourth quarter.

And twelve million is really not much of a campaign fund considering that Hillary and Obama have raised several times that much. Ron Paul desperately needs to expand his base as soon as possible. And the only way to do that is to run nation-wide ads, which he has so far stubbornly refused to do.

While I have failed to persuade the Ron Paul campaign, maybe you readers can succeed at changing his mind. If you agree that the Ron Paul campaign needs to reach out to lots of new people, then call up his campaign staff (at

 703-248-9115

) and demand that he start running nation-wide ads now. Tell them that you won't donate another penny until you see that first national commercial (and local ads in New Hampshire or Iowa don't count). Only a national ad will convince you that he's serious about winning this race. Tell them that he needs to expand his base and to stop preaching to the same Internet choir over and over.

The Ron Paul campaign has been running some ads in New Hampshire and other small states. This is ridiculous!!!! There are 300 million people in America. Run ads that will play in California, where the anti-war vote could win Ron Paul the biggest state in the union and where there are quite a few wealthy individuals who would be highly sympathetic if they only knew Ron Paul existed. Huckabee Lies to Christian Conference

Filed under:

- Civil Rights

— @ 4:35 am

by Charles Coughlin

What do you do when you are an Open Borders advocate, who wants to turn every city in America into a run-down Tijuana slum and you have to talk to a group of ordinary Christian Americans? Well, if your name is Mike Huckabee, you stand up there and LIE right to their faces.

Mike Huckabee had the nerve to claim that he's all for "securing the border." Somehow he failed to mention that he thinks it's "un-Christian" to deny benefits to people, who have illegally entered the US and that he won't consider deporting the 20 million illegals in the US today.

One biography of Huckabee notes "Huckabee has been criticized for supporting illegal immigration. In his 2005 State of the State address, he complained that a Hispanic student was not able to get financial aid because he was an illegal alien. Huckabee said: 'But when he applied for financial aid, he wasn't eligible for the various scholarships or grants because of his status, a status that he had no decision in or control over.' Huckabee vehemently opposed a 2005 bill sponsored by Arkansas State Senator Jim Holt which would deny state benefits to illegal immigrants, calling it 'un-Christian.' Huckabee argued that illegal immigrants pay more in taxes than they receive in benefits: 'They pay fuel taxes. If they're using a fake Social Security number, they're paying Social Security taxes and will never receive any benefit. It would be closer to the truth to say they're subsidizing Joe McCutchen and Jim Holt more than the other way around.' "

Not only is Mike Huckabee shamefully pro-illegal alien; he is a fantastic liar too. Huckabee repeats the lies of the Open Borders crowd claiming that illegals are paying their way in taxes. This claim is total garbage. California loses an estimate FIVE BILLION DOLLARS per year on illegal aliens. Does that sound like they're paying their way??? Most illegals work for cash on the black market paying NOTHING in taxes. Mike Huckabee is either a liar or a complete idiot. Either way, he's not qualified to be president because he doesn't take the right side of this vital issue. (more...)
